Hospice of the Piedmont, and Sentara Martha Jefferson Hospital

The 3rd Melton D. and Muriel Haney Interprofessional Conference: Honoring Differences at the End of Life

Saturday, September 17, 2016 • 8:00am – 4:00pm

UVA School of Nursing, Charlottesville, VA

Provided by the Office of Continuing Medical Education, University of Virginia School of Medicine

PROGRAM OVERVIEW

This symposium will gather health professionals, caregivers, and students with a shared interest in relieving suffering and providing compassionate care, recognizing the diverse needs of individuals and families at the end of life.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

Following this symposium, participants will be better able to:

- Demonstrate best practices for effective communication with patients and families facing serious, life-limiting illnesses, with a special focus on difficult conversations.
- Identify and respond to cultural differences and varied approaches to serious illness and end of life care in diverse populations, to include racial, ethnic, socioeconomic, gender, and sexual identity perspectives.
- Recognize the importance of spiritual care and apply appropriate assessments at the end of life, with a special emphasis on various religious and non-religious perspectives.
- Identify underserved populations and explore ways to extend access to palliative and end of life care.
- Apply principles and techniques of self-care, resiliency, and support for those who provide palliative and end of life care.
