UVA Cancer Center provides comprehensive, world-class cancer treatment in a caring environment for patients across Virginia and the mid-Atlantic, led by doctors who have been recognized as among the best in their fields by organizations such as Best Doctors in America.

We are proud to deliver advanced care and the latest research-based treatment options to patients at the Emily Couric Clinical Cancer Center in Charlottesville and in the Augusta, Charlottesville and Culpeper communities through the UVA Community Oncology Network. These advanced medical oncology and hematology clinics make UVA Cancer Center one of the most accessible cancer centers in the region.

UVA CANCER CENTER IS ONE OF ONLY:

- 3 percent of cancer centers in the nation ranked in the top 50 by U.S. News & World Report
- 100 hospitals and health systems with great oncology programs listed by Becker's Hospital Review and the only Virginia center listed for the fifth year in a row
- 69 National Cancer Institute (NCI)-designated cancer centers in the U.S. This designation is awarded only to those centers that meet NCI's rigorous criteria for establishing programs in multidisciplinary cancer research and dedicate extensive resources to developing more effective approaches to cancer prevention, diagnosis and treatment.
